Carol Kranowitz, MA

How Sensory Processing Affects Children's Learning and Behavior

The highly regarded author of The Out-of-Sync Child and many other books offers insightful strategies and practical techniques for helping children learn, grow, and thrive in their increasingly demanding world.

Carol gives you the tools to recognize, understand, and help children whose learning and behavior are challenged by their inability to interpret and react effectively to everyday sensations at home and school. She shares her extensive knowledge of childhood development gained through 25 years experience as a preschool teacher.

Ms. Kranowitz earned her master's degree in education and human development at The George Washington University. She is the award-winning author of The Out-of-Sync Child, The Goodenoughs Get in Sync, and The Out-of-Sync Child Has Fun, as well as many book chapters and magazine articles.

Her latest work, Preschool Sensory Scan for Educators (Preschool SENSE), provides a unique collaborative tool for therapists and preschool teachers. She is also editor-in-chief of S.I. Focus magazine. A frequent and popular speaker, she has presented in Australia, Singapore, Indonesia, Japan, Canada, England, Ireland, and throughout the United States.

Paula Aquilla, OT

Sensory Diets and Communication Strategies to Help Children at School and at Home

Ms. Aquilla is the noted co-author of Building Bridges through Sensory Integration! Her presentation focuses on selecting and implementing practical sensory techniques to use at home and in school.

Paula Aquilla explains how anxiety and sensory overload can affect a child's behavior, and how a "sensory diet" can help a child focus and learn. Paula also provides simple but proven strategies and techniques for improving therapy through better communication among parents, teachers, and therapists. She offers concrete ideas that you can apply immediately and demonstrates practical tools that are easy to use.

Paula, a practicing occupational therapist for more than 20 years, has worked with adults and children in a variety of settings and with diagnoses ranging from autism to sensory processing disorder. She founded a nursery school, a summer camp, and an infants program in Toronto, and she is currently in private practice.
